At ISM, we are all learners.

ISM Common Understanding of Learning

At ISM, we understand that learning is a lifelong, ongoing process.

Learners develop understanding by acquiring knowledge and skills, constructing meaning and making connections through inquiry, action and reflection.

ISM Principles of Learning

AUTHENTICITY

When learning is authentic, learners are able to make real-life connections, understand the 'why' and explain the relevance of what they are learning.

INDEPENDENCE AND INTERACTION

When learning is independent and interactive, then learners know how and when to work by themselves, with others and know when to ask for assistance.

INCLUSIVITY

When learning is inclusive, then learners are able to learn regardless of language level, academic strengths and educational needs. Students feel safe and free to express their thoughts and beliefs.

CREATIVITY

When learning is creative, then the learning environment supports learners taking risks and leaves room for mistakes and growth. Creative learning considers multiple perspectives and promotes the generation of new ideas and innovative solutions.

CHALLENGE

When learning is challenging, then each learner is pushed to discover new abilities and exceed their perceived limits.

REFLECTION

When learning is reflective, learners take ownership of their choices and personal growth. They reflect on their own actions and the actions of others in order to improve.
